

2023 / 24 AGM Annual Report: The Adult Social Care APPG

The Adult Social Care All Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) remained steadfast in its commitment to addressing the multifaceted challenges within the social care sector during the 2023/24 reporting year. Under the joint leadership of Sarah Owen MP and Damian Green MP, the group continued to serve as a pivotal platform for cross-party collaboration, striving to find innovative solutions for a sustainable social care model that meets the evolving needs of the population.

Membership and Structure

The Working Group of the APPG continued to thrive with active participation from a diverse array of organizations dedicated to supporting its mission. These members not only contributed financially but also brought invaluable expertise and insights to the table, ensuring a robust foundation for the group's activities. The inclusive nature of the APPG's structure, coupled with its annual membership framework, fostered a sense of ownership and accountability among stakeholders, driving collective efforts towards shared goals.

Lived Experience Advisory Group

One of the APPG's defining features is its unwavering commitment to inclusivity and representation. The Lived Experience Advisory Group, comprising individuals with firsthand experience of care and support, played a pivotal role in shaping the group's agenda and priorities. Through their active involvement in decision-making processes and co-production activities, these individuals ensured that the voices of those directly impacted by social care policies were not only heard but also heeded.

Activity Overview

Ministerial, Opposition, and Spokesperson Meetings

The group facilitated dedicated meetings with key policymakers, including Minister for Care Helen Whatley, Health and Social Care Spokesperson for the Liberal Democrats Lord Allan, Professor Julienne Meyer, Chair of the Older People's Housing Taskforce, and Shadow Minister for Care Andrew Gwynne MP. These engagements provided invaluable opportunities for dialogue and collaboration on pressing policy matters, ensuring that the APPG's advocacy efforts were informed by the latest insights and perspectives from across the political spectrum. These discussions served as platforms for robust conversations on key policy proposals and initiatives, reaffirming the group's commitment to driving positive change within the social care landscape.

Community Engagement

Partnering with organizations like Championing Social Care and My Vote My Voice, the APPG spearheaded a range of community-focused activities aimed at raising awareness and advocating for meaningful change. From organizing local MP visits to care settings as part of Care Home Open Week 2023 to hosting parliamentary receptions on topics like accessible voting, these initiatives served to bridge the gap between policymakers and grassroots stakeholders, fostering greater understanding and collaboration.

Research and Advocacy

The launch of the "Future of Care 5" report marked a significant milestone in the APPG's advocacy efforts. By consolidating insights from multiple stakeholders and distilling them into actionable recommendations, the report provided a roadmap for social care reform. From prioritizing person-centered care to advocating for long-term funding solutions and workforce development, the APPG's research-driven approach underscored its commitment to driving tangible outcomes and influencing policy decisions at the highest levels.

Conclusion

As the 2023/24 reporting year draws to a close, the Adult Social Care APPG stands poised to build upon its achievements and confront the challenges that lie ahead. As it looks towards the future, the APPG remains committed to amplifying diverse voices, fostering meaningful dialogue, and shaping a more equitable and sustainable social care system for all.
